Closing Exercises of the Mt. Sterling Collegiate School

The closing exercises of the Mt. Sterling Collegiate School, Miss Helen Chenault, principal, will take place at the Southern Presbyterian Church Friday evening, at 8 o'clock.

Miss Helen Montgomery's class in elocution will be very much in evidence in these exercises. The teacher is pardonedly proud of the efficient work done by her class during the past year, and is as anxious as the pupils themselves to give an exhibition of their progress.

The class in English, the highest class in school, will be on hand with some admirable selections that will be beautifully rendered. Rev. Everett Gill is slated for an address to the young ladies of the school. There will be some good music from Miss Graves music class.

Miss Chenault began her school a year since, and at its opening promised her patrons faithful and keeping service. How well she has kept her promise may best be gathered from the voluntary offers of support for the coming year and the enthusiastic praises for the work done during the current one. Miss Chenault has had efficient assistants in her school, and will in the coming session keep the grade of her teaching force up to the same high standard. There is this year no class of graduates, but there are in the higher classes some who can in the coming years be with pride presented with diplomas from this fine school.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

The excursion to Natural Bridge Wednesday, June 10th. Train leaves Mt. Sterling at 7 a.m. and returns at 7 p.m.

A PRIEST'S THREAT.

Says That Catholics of Kentucky Will Defend Themselves.

Frankfort, Ky., May 31.—Father Tom Major, pastor of the Roman Catholic Church of this city, electrified his congregation to-night when he touched on the subject of the A. P. A. in his sermon. He said that what was being made on the Catholics and it was time something was being done in the way of self-defense by the Catholics. By direction of the Bishop of this diocese he said the head representative of the Y. M. I. in this State would write and try to ascertain the opinion of each Presidential possibility in both parties as to the A. P. A. movement, and that the Catholics should vote accordingly. He stated that a number of Catholics had voted for Governor Bradley last fall and had since found reason to be sorry for it.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Commencement exercises of the Millersburg Female College will be held at the Opera House in that city to-morrow evening. Miss Julia Haden Wyatt, of this city, is one of the graduates.

GRAZED AND CRUSHED.

Over 1,100 People Trampled to Death at Moscow.

On Saturday the Czar had prepared an immense banquet with meals for 500,000 people on the Kolodijnskoye plain just outside of the city of Moscow in honor of his coronation. It is estimated that nearly a million people, mainly peasants, had gathered around the tables. The police regulations were inadequate and in some untrained manner a panic was started. Before the wild mass of humanity could be controlled as many as 1,138 people had been trampled to death. Many more were injured.

St. Louis Desolated.

Probably the most destructive cyclone in the history of this country struck St. Louis on Wednesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. The track of the storm lay through that city and East St. Louis. As the mighty giant of the air came, it wrought havoc and destruction untold. More than 500 lives were lost in and near the two cities and the property loss will reach the enormous sum of $50,000,000. The great Eads bridge was very

BIG SNOW IN MONTANA.

Has Been Falling For Nineteen Days and is Now Six Feet Deep.

Missoula, Mont., May 25.—Snow, falling so thick and fast that the eyes cannot see over 100 feet, with six feet of hard and frozen snow on the ground, is the sight that greets one the Coeur d'Alene branch of the Northern Pacific road, three hours' ride from this city, and in all that time, not ten hours has passed in which the air has not been filled with the steady sifting cloud of flakes. There is not the faintest suspicion of spring, the cabins of the woodmen and miners and the little station on the divide are as completely covered as in the depths of winter. There never has been so great a snowfall in all this section as this spring, nor so late a spring, and the indications are that when the warm winds melt the masses of snow there will be floods that will carry away the roadbeds, tracks, buildings and everything that can be swept off the earth.

The young men and young ladies will have a great time on the excursion June 10th.

WATER WORKS.

What John P. Martin is Doing Action of the City Council.

Mr. John P. Martin has perfected his arrangements for the building of a water plant here with parties who say they have the money to put it through, and work will begin between now and the first day of August. Mr. Martin has been doing all in his power to get this work under way for more than a year, and as evidence of what he will give our people, we have only to refer to the excellent electric light plant, which he constructed here and the services we are receiving. To the City Council he said: "I have spent thousands of dollars and have made great sacrifices in order to begin work, and finish the plant within the prescribed time." By an exhibit of his correspondence he proved beyond any question that he had not been idle, and because of his faithfulness and the proposition to him from capitalists, the Council, as a unit, granted him until August 1st in which to begin work and until January 1st, 1897, in which to complete it. In addition to this Mr. Martin hopes to add to this enterprise the construction of an electric railway from here to Sharpsburg. Mr. Martin is expected here the early part of this week with his capitalists, and no time will be lost in getting a move in the direction of completing both plants. In the event he contracts both these enterprises a large force of hands will be put to work, and the weekly pay roll from now until completion will enliven business matters very much.

The Council in giving Mr. Martin an extension held on to the right of the city. The right thing has been done and Mr. Martin has the opportunity of carrying into effect his plan.

Memorial Meeting.

The following letter has been received, extending an invitation to members of the Mt. Sterling bar to participate in a service to be held in memory of the late G. C. Lockhart:

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

By local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound of imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Results Tell The Story.

A vast mass of direct unimpeachable testimony proves beyond any possibility of doubt that Hood's Sarapills actually does perfectly and permanently cure disease caused by impure blood. Its record of cures is unequalled and these cures have often been accomplished after other preparations had failed.

Hood's Pills cure all liver ills, biliousness, jaundice, indigestion, sick headache.

Kate Field Dead.

Kate Field, the well-known writer, is dead at Honolulu. The only news of the event is contained in a cable message dated Yokohama and signed by ex-Minister Thurston, which said: "Kate Field died at Honolulu May 19 of pneumonia."

A call has been issued to the Democratic County Chairmen of Montgomery, Bath, Rowan and Monrovia Counties, who compose the committee for the 21st Judicial District, to meet Olympia, June 10, to consider the time, place and manner of nominating a Democratic candidate for Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney

Heart Disease Cured

By Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

Fainting, Weak or Hungry Spells, Irregular Intermittent Pulse, Fainting or Palpitation, Choking Sensation, Shortness of Breath, Swelling of Feet and Ankles, are symptoms of a diseased or Weak Heart.

Mrs. N. C. MILLER.

Of Fort Wayne, Ind., written on Nov. 20, 1890:
"I was afflicted for forty years with heart trouble and suffered until agony. I had weak, hungry spells, and my heart would palpitate. It would be acute and torturing, that I became so weak and nervous I could not sleep. I was treated by several physicians without success. About two years ago I commenced using Dr. Miles' Remedies. One bottle of the Heart Cure stopped all heart trouble and the doctor said I was cured. I sleep soundly and attend to my household and social duties with out any trouble."

Free Advice to Horse Owners

If your horse groans when urinating and the urine is thick and "milky" lose no time in feeding a package of Dr. Daniels' Horse Renovator. It regulates the stomach and kidneys, increases the weight 40 to 75 pounds in four weeks, and the horses acts and drives "fine as silk." Dr. Daniels' Renovator costs fifty cents, (more than some other so-called condition powders). Feed it and you will assert that it is cheaper, because it does what is claimed. Put it up in doses. Sold only by J. B. Tipton. Ask for book free.

Notice.

The business heretofore conducted by J. D. Wilson, dec'd, will be continued at the same stand by the undersigned. I will continue to handle fresh and choice varieties of vegetables and meats of the very best quality. No pains will be spared to give all customers, old and new, the most polite and efficient service. Thanking all for the liberal patronage extended to my father for so many years, I ask a continuation of the same to myself.

Respectfully,

THE MOONSHINER OF FACT.
He is vastly different from the Wild Creature Pictures.

He is neither a bandit nor a highwayman, a disturber of the peace, nor, in respect to formularies other than the revenue statutes, a law breaker. Least of all, perhaps, is he a desperado. Within a month of the present writing, he had come on over the transatlantic railway and entered the smoking car of the train. In the rear seat sat an officer in charge of a "convoy" of moonshiners flushed by him on the mountain the night before. There were 12 in the party. They had yielded without resistance to one man, and, most singular circumstance of all in the south, the deputy had not found it necessary to put them in irons.

At first trial the members of this party with whom he pleased equality to a somewhat little hard living would probably clear half of them. They will beg for mercy or for light sentences, and those of them who promise amendment will most likely never be again brought in on the same charge, for the mountaineer is prone to keep his promises.

A venerable judge, in whom judicial experience is the exacting evidence of loving kindliness and mercy, and whose humane decisions have made his name a word to conjure with among the dwellers in the waste places, tells a story which emphasizes the promise keeping trait in the mountain character. A hardened sinner of the stills, whose first and second offenses were already recorded against him, was once again brought to book by the vigilance of the law.

As an old man who had neither son nor son repented, it was likely to go hard with him, and he begged not for liberty, but for a commutation of his sentence which would send him to jail instead of the penitentiary, promising that so long as the judge remained upon the bench he would neither make nor meddle with illicit whisky.

Won his case and was sent to jail for a term of 11 months. This was in summer, and six months later when the judge, having powdered the bleak summits of Chilhowee, the judge received a letter from the convict. It was a simple hearted petition for a "furlough" of ten days, pathetic and eloquent in its primitive English and quaint spelling. Would the good judge let him off for just ten days? Winter was coming on, and wife and children were alone in the cabin the mother with no one to make provision for the household. He would not overstay the time, and he would "certain shore" come back.

His petition was granted, and, true to his word, the mountaineer returned on the tenth day and gave himself up to the sheriff. He served the remainder of his sentence, and, after his release, kept his pledge so long as the judge remained on the bench.—Lippincott's.

One of the Evils of Wealth.

The family of one of the richest men in New York was visited long ago by a contagious disease. A health inspector was obliged to go through the magnificent mansion on the Fifth avenue, and a pretty state of affairs it privately told his wife, he found there. "It almost makes one contented with one's modest home," he added, "and with the knowledge that you and I are not so very, nor too fashionable, nor too elegant, nor too poor after our own household matters. That naturally everything is left in the hands of servants. They are supposed to be most competent, but they are only servants, after all, and not so deeply interested as the owner would be. Such a cellar as stands under that splendid pile I never saw outside of a tenement house in the shiniest slums. It was piled high with indescribable refuse and filth, rotting there in the heat of a hitherto disaster and menace, a wonder that there is a sound life to be had. I tell you I made the mistress of that home pale with horror before I had finished my explanation of causes and my threats as to what effects she might anticipate unless a new regime was inaugurated."—Philadelphia Press.

He Moved the Castle.

Here is a picture of the life of Dr. Herter Evans, who about 15 years ago, broke down in health, was sent to Buxton with instructions from his medical adviser not to preach for 15 months. It seems that he had got so downcast at not being able to preach for such a prolonged period that he doubted his own powers of ever again being of any use. In this frame of mind he went far, and often, fields one fine Sunday morning and noon, the wild Welsh valley at the very top of his strength.

Suddenly the sheep and cattle, which were quietly browsing by, looked up and ran to him from all parts of the field. Herter returned thanks to Providence that he still had the power at least of moving cattle and sheep, and from this point he regained confidence in himself, and his recovery was rapid.—London Globe.

Sunday Trading in the Past.

It may safely be asserted that from the time of the Conqueror (1066-1087) Sunday trading received royal protection. In early ages markets and fairs were held on Sundays, and frequently in the churchyards.

In 1305 the inhabitants of Cockerham presented a petition to parliament, as their market was fast declining through the inhabitants of Crosthwaite dealing in corn, flour, beans, fish, flesh, at their church on Sundays, and that thereby they were unable to pay their tolls to the king (about £100). An order was issued for closing the church market at Crosthwaite.

At Bradford, Yorkshire, during the same reign, the market was held on a Sunday, doubtless in the churchyard. The toll yielded £2 per annum.

In 1285 a statute was passed enacting that henceforth neither fairs nor markets should be held in churchyards, for the honor of the church.

In 1313 a market was granted to the town of Bedale, Durham, for a Friday, but was soon changed to Sunday.

In 1367 the archbishop of Canterbury and York delivered charges directing, among other things, that "we firmly forbid any one to keep a market in the churches, the porches and the cemeteries thereto belonging or other holy places on the Lord's day or other holy festivals."—Notes and Queries.

Was Baptized Battledore.

It was proved at a baptizing in Kentucky that it is well to go well prepared if you are to be baptized, says the Albany (Ky.) Courier.

A citizen who was immersed testifies that when his son was baptized he had intended to baptize, but it took him a long time to make up his mind. At last, however, he came to a decision, and the minister led him into the pool. So far all was well.

The trouble commenced as soon as the minister tried to put the citizen's head under the water.

The citizen apparently did not object to standing in the water up to his ears, but further, or rather deeper, he did not wish to go. Finally, as the minister reached out his hand to his head and began to pull, he did so and it likes it, and loudly proclaims that this exacting creature is the most delightful example of husband known.

Curiously enough, the real person is not the exacting creature, but the ideally accepted picture of the typical American husband, with his narrow, sordid, bank clerk soul, his neglectful mind and his cynical estimate of woman as a fantastic child with an insatiable lust for luxury.

Perhaps the typical husbands of other nations have been as much lied, and the Frenchman is not the sensualist who thrusts the woman's pretty babies from her arms into alien hands in order that her attentions may not for a moment be distract from his labor.

The husband who elevates his wife from the wash tub in a mining camp to the palace of a millionaire expects her to create out of the chaos of her previous experiences an ordered social world between the morning and the evening of her first day of wealth—and she does it and likes it, and loudly proclaims that this exacting creature is the most delightful example of husband known.

Perhaps the German wife is not really an unpaid, contemptuously treated upper servant or the English woman the victim of a selfish, domineering master.

At all events, but few women find

Crust of the Earth.

The crust of the earth, according to Professor John Milne's opinion, is in a constant state of agitation—earth movements being experienced at all times and in all lands—the greatest European crust agitation having its seat in Germany, Japan occupying a similar position in Asia.

In both Germany and Japan a tide-like movement too great to be produced by lunar attractions has been observed, the ground rising gently like a wave, and then subsiding again, and in all cases the buildings, trees, etc., stand slightly inclined, like cornstalks in a gentle and steady breeze—in short, the earth is constantly breathing, as it were, the crust making each respiration by a gentle rising and falling similar to that of the chest in air breathing animals.

A certain per cent of this earth crust disturbance is believed to be due to conditions similar to those existing in the interior of the earth.

Thus, in the case of the Japanese earthquake, this being represented as especially the fact in respect to Japan, where it has been traced to the continual opening and closing of the broken strata in the main range of mountains.

This Boy Will Bear Watching.

There is a boy in Bradford who should rival Lord Russell of Killowen as a cross examiner when he grows up. In the police court there he and four others were charged with stone throwing, and he thus cross examined the constable:

"What many windows did you break?"

"Four."

"And how many stones did you find inside?"

"Three."

"But how can you charge five boys with breaking four windows with three stones?"

Given boys, stones, and windows, almost anything might happen, but the query puzzled the policeman and the boys got off.—London Tit-Bits.

She Knew.

"Maria," said Boggles to his wife, with an idea of instructing her in political economy, "do you know what civil service is?"

"I'm sorry," replied Mrs. Boggles, with memory of recent contact with the cook, "there isn't any." Illus-

HER IDEAL MALE MATE.

Elizabeth Blandford's Description of the National Husband of America.

There is a theory that the patient, unexacting financial agent who is supposed to typify the genus husband in America—who, like charity, suffereth long and is kind, thinketh no evil, and giveth all his goods—is woman's ideal of a mate, but this is a slander. The dull submission of the overladen ass is not the characteristic which ordinarily excites feminine respect.

That brilliant, gay figure, hung with jewels, who stands aloft in the social car, laying the goad upon the bowed shoulders of the humble, overworked married slave who draws her chariot, is purely a figure evolved out of the notebooks of shallow foreigners rushing express through the country to make a volume of travels.

The really American husband is the most exacting of his kind. He demands gaiety, physical and mental charm, a high cultivation of all her powers, and an infinity of carefully performed duties from his wife.

If the American woman is brilliant and ornate, he is equally exacting, and his amorous husband will put up with nothing less. In older civilizations woman finds in married life all the conditions prepared for her; made which she has only to rule, obey; a careful code of precedents which she has only to follow.

Here a woman may be within a period of seven days transported from a country boarding school to the most conspicuous position in the land, and without previous training to be expected to receive commands and reside at stations of command.

The husband who elevates his wife from the wash tub in a mining camp to the palace of a millionaire expects her to create out of the chaos of her previous experiences an ordered social world between the morning and the evening of her first day of wealth—and she does it and likes it, and loudly proclaims that this exacting creature is the most delightful example of husband known.

Curiously enough, the real person is not the exacting creature, but the ideally accepted picture of the typical American husband, with his narrow, sordid, bank clerk soul, his neglectful mind and his cynical estimate of woman as a fantastic child with an insatiable lust for luxury.

HIS MISSION.

They came through the meadows of childhood together hand in hand. And often they talked of the future that waited in John London's Land. And one day over the glory that crowns the peaks of fame—

"Up to the heights where beauty dwells, me by your side." I will some time find, my comrade, with kindred souls, the way."

Angels had turned ever to the heights he could not see.

The beauty that was about him. Blind to it But the others saw all the flowers that grew by the paths they trod.

He read on the hills and the meadows the wordless poems of God. He saw the shadow of the arrow that would wound him forever.

He spoke his words to a comrade and lighted his pipe of tobacco.

"Here is work for my hands, my brother. It is grand on every side."

It was grand, like a hero's, but I shall be satisfied.

If into the lives of others I bring some hope And feel that the world is better because of my being here."

The ways their feet had followed parted in two. And he whose eyes saw only the peaks far off and grand Strained his eyes toward them and paused not once by the way.

To help and comfort a comrade, as some time the west wind did.

He climbed up the hills and over their summits passed from sight.

And so he went on in the glory that crowns the mystic heights.

But no man's heart thrilled warmly when another spoke his name.

Ah, that was the pity of which feeds on the hearts of fame!

But he who saw all about his work for his wife and children, And he who, though nobly, as by a king's command, He had helped the weak and the weary, he had no home! And no man knew the number of burdens he had borne!

He sang of the grand heart was heavy, songs full of hope and cheer, And his songs brought comfort and courage, And men and women and children speak lovingly his name.

Ah, that was the findeth that love is better than fame!

—Eben E. Rexford in Youth's Companion.

SIGHTLESS EYES.

John London sat alone in a corner of his library and listened. "But, Pia, dearest, what strange questions you ask me!"

The voice was that of a young girl, tender and childlike in its pleading tone. It crept into the heart of the lonely man and made him tremble.

"My little country lassie, I cannot help it."

This was from another mouth and a voice more womanly in its compass.

"It is my duty as his sister and as sacred to me as God's commands."

"Speak more softly, dear. Your brother can hear every word you are saying."

Pia subdued her voice to a whisper.

"I shall never allow a girl to become enamored of him. Never! If such a thing should come to pass, I will keep it away from him. When I mention such silly infatuation! Love, yes, real love until death! Powerful, eternal! I know he is waiting for such love. Your duties, Pia, will be greater than those of other women. But in return you will have a happier and more grateful husband. How lovely you are in your bridal gown! If he could only see you!"

"Be quiet, Pia. He must not hear things!"

But the sister continued with a sad smile.

"Alas, you will never be seen by him!"

"He loves me. Is not this happiness enough?"

"Will you never long to be seen?"

Why does she whisper the words excitedly, almost threateningly?

Clarice looked questioningly at her.

"Long to be seen? What do you mean?"

"Forgive me. No, you are different from other women. You are not vain, and can forego the pleasure of being seen. I had such dreadful thoughts last night."

Clarice shook her head. She could not understand her sister.

Three years had gone by since they were married, and Clarice's favorite place was still at her husband's feet. There she sat against his knees, and he stroked the fair face and soft curls with caressing fingers.

In this position she could look up into his face and see his eyes, which were brown and gentle and not at all as they were sightless. Tears gathered in hers with tender compassion.

"What a beautiful face you have!" flattered the wife. It made him smile.

"And I like your eyes, half veiled by the lids as they are, so different from other blind people, who have that wide open, meaningless stare."

"You are right; that would be very disagreeable. When I was a boy, I saw a blind man stare at me once with such wide open eyes, and I made up my mind that if I ever should lose my sight I would avoid that stare. There is only one thing that would make me look at you in a way that would brighten you, if you should ever do me a wrong!"

She knew he was fond of teasing her.

They lived not far from the city during the winter months. John London watched with passionate care over the welfare of her only brother. She had inherited that all absorbing sentiment from her dead mother. Since the accident that robbed him of his sight when a child John London had been the center of the family. He bore his misfortune with fortitude, as something which could not be helped. His physical condition, however, after the guidance of an excellent doctor, helped to fill out the empty hours of his life, and his clever essays found ready publishers. Pia had forced her own heart to silence as well as the handsome neighbor whom she loved and who loved her.

"I am the mainstay of John's life. First he, then—

The two months ago Clarice had come to the home of her friends. She was an orphan distantly related to the Loudons. Her father was an army officer, who lived a quiet, eventful life in the country after his retirement from active service. He died suddenly and left his only child helpless. Her mother she had never known.

Pia was delighted with the charm of girl, who showed rare taste and poise to her heart. Clarice was bright, slender, vivacious and proud—a mixture of which Pia thoroughly approved.

When tea time came, they gathered again in John's cozy library. The blind man sat by the window, and the two girls busied themselves in the other part of the room.

Clarice took up the silver tray with John's tea and carried it over to him. Her step was almost inaudible as it sank into the velvet carpet. But he turned his face toward her before she had half traversed the room.

"How well you hear, John!"

"Yes, and I feel things even more." She placed the cup on the little table, as she did so her dress brushed his hand.

"You have on your white dress, Clarice!"

"Yes, because you said that you disliked black."

"I dislike all dark colors."

"How did you know about the white dress?"

"I felt it."

"You feel everything!"

She stood before him and waited.

"Would you feel it if some one loved you?"

"If some one loved me?"

There was a pause. Then the blind man said with a smile:

"Certainly, and I have never been mistaken."

"And if it were true that some one loved you, should you know?"

"Love is a silent beat madly."

"A girl!"

"Clarice!" cried the blind man, full of glad presentiment.

"Do you feel it, John?"

He caught her hands and held them fast. Not a sound disturbed their blissful silence. Then she took his hand and laid it over her trembling breast.

"Yes, I feel it! You love me, you, Clarice!"

Sprang to his feet and shouted like a playful schoolboy.

"Pia, sister, come to me! I have found a wife!"

The sister's eyes had been more farseeing, and she had left the room some time ago.

On the day on which John London was married to Clarice, Pia kissed the cheeks of the young bride, her hair, moon and her hands, full of tender gratitude.

"Make him happy, and I will lay down my life for you! Your duties, Clarice, will be greater than those of other women. But in return you will have a happier and more grateful husband. How lovely you are in your bridal gown! If he could only see you!"

"Be quiet, Pia. He must not hear things!"

SHELBY'S WAR STORY.

The General Praised When Executed an Order of Court Martial.

"The first time I went into a fight," said that gallant and genial Alabamian, General C. M. Shelly, "I was in great mental distress. My company was composed of splendid young fellows, and I was afraid some of them had ever been subjected to the enemy's fire. I knew that there was no coward blood in any of them, and I felt sure that the epithet could not be justly applied to me. But, in spite of all, there were the dread, the horror, the uncertainty of our ability to withstand attack, and for several hours preceding the conflict I was in mortal agony. It was the most awful experience of my life."

"I had been sent forward with my company to delay an advancing force of Federals till the main body of our troops could be got in readiness, and by order of Colonel Rhodes, afterward one of our prominent generals, rode about several miles in front of the Federal lines. While throughout the whole of my ride my nervousness increased, for the idea still haunted me that maybe we would all show the white feather and disgrace ourselves and the southern cause. Presently the enemy came in sight, a good many hundred to our fifty, but we got a pretty fair position on a hillside, covered with timber of moderate growth, and awaited their approach.

"The Federals kept coming at us till within range, and turned loose a volley that, to my great relief, did no harm beyond inflicting a slight flesh wound on one of my men. Immediately on receipt of that fire my feelings underwent a revolution impossible to describe. I grew suddenly buoyant. I had no disposition to run, neither had a single individual of my company, instantly my mind, which had almost ceased to act, began to operate as usual. I began to plan, and I studied out the details of the fight. Time and again the Federals charged us, but every time they got that far off us. We killed several of them and wounded a good many, but not a man of us had been seriously hurt."

"Finally, after two hours of hot work, they saw that they only way to dislodge us was to surround us, and very reluctantly I saw the necessity of retreating. This was a bitter pill, and I felt that I would be held up to ignominy for turning my back to the foe. A message came, however, from Colonel Rhodes at this crisis, commanding our retreat, and we retired in good order."

"A few days later I was the recipient of a message from Colonel Rhodes, which I read with interest. He looked upon it as my death warrant. My conduct in that skirmish was to be investigated and I was going to be court-martialed for cowardice. Judge of my surprise when he showed me a communication signed by Beauregard, complimenting the conduct of the officers and men in that very affair. It struck me as the most flagrant case of undeserved praise, and I told Rhodes that I did not propose to take a particle of it to myself, for ever since the encounter I had experienced nothing but humiliation, which General Beauregard's compliments did not alleviate." —Washington Post.

In a Drug Store.

"I could not help getting interested in the different people who come in with prescriptions," said a dispensing clerk in a drug store to me. "My knowledge tells me pretty well how the case is going. Sometimes I know it's hopeless long before those who come for the medicines do, and then I often say an encouraging word when I perceive the remedies called for that the patient is minding."

Mad About It

The Courier-Journal is not a little sore at the overwhelming defeat the Single Standard people have met in the State and in its penitence it says: "They have repudiated the only President the Democratic party has elected and seated for forty years."

"They have repudiated the most distinguished of Kentucky's living sons and the greatest Democratic intellect in the United States."

"They have condemned the ablest Administrator of our national finance the country has ever known, and have disowned the executives who will be gratefully acknowledged in all future history as having stood between our republic and ruin despite a terrific pressure to which none of their predecessors was ever subjected."

"They have spit upon the fathers of party whose name and organization they claim—have proclaimed Jefferson an ignoramus, Jackson a conspirator, Benton a knave, Cleveland a traitor."

"For the faith handed down through a hundred years of glorious party history they have substituted a faith rejected by science, by experience and by every intelligent civilization on the globe, and for the exponents of that faith they have substituted such apostles of Populism as Stewart, such exhorters of Socialism as Tillman, such evangeliasts of Anarchism as Allred."

Catoctin Woodford won the medal for the old soldier and M.A. Tyler the medal for the best new soldier. Young Tyler, said Major Fowler, is one of the kind who will not be dethroned. He started with odds against him; most boys would have been discouraged, but not so with him. He pressed forward seeing nothing but success, and came out an easy winner.

The girls, bless them. They never fail to come out best. Every one of them made a favorable impression and their friends were all proud of them.

Major Fowler, to the regret of all, has decided to change his location. He has accomplished much here and while our people, one and all, regret to see him go their best wishes follow him.

K. T. S.

On last Thursday evening at the Opera House was the closing exercises of the Kentucky Training School and Maj. Fowler was justly proud of the effort of his boys, and girls as well. There were three full graduates, J. Wells Johnson, John Anderson and Anderson and Thornton Woodford.

These young men had finished the course prescribed and after a close examination were awarded diplomas.

Harry and Foster Rogers received certificates in English and Wm. VanAntwerp a certificate in English and Science. Harry C. Rogers, over three competitors, received a medal for the best oration. Young Rogers spoke distinctly and gracefully and with the vim of his life carried the audience with him. The other young men acquitted themselves creditably.

In the declaimers contest held at the School building on Wednesday evening, with five formidable competitors Joseph Taubler, son of the late W.P. Taubler, won the medal with ease. Young Taubler is gifted as an orator and with that grit which few possess he surmounted difficulties and came out first. Major Fowler in speaking of him and his opportunities complimented him highly, and saw in him those qualities which make the leader among men.

An Ordinance

WHEREAS, Mrs. Mary E. McGuire, T. D. and Fannie L. Jones, E. S. Apperson and John T. Woodford have by their written instrument of writing this day died with this body, agreed to give a strip of land running South to the city limits, said strip of land being 50 feet in width and running with the old Levee dirt road through the lands of the said McGuire, Jones, Apperson and Woodford, and further agree to set their fencing back on a line of said 50 feet and at their own expense; now, in consideration of the said agreement of said named parties that the city should fix the grade of said road, the same to be fixed by the City Engineer, and the further agreement that they will each make and deed the said strip of land to the said city for street purposes, is now resolved by this Council that the said proposition be accepted by said city and that as soon as the said fencing is set back as defined by the City Engineer, and the deeds are made by the parties named respectively, the city will and hereby agrees to grade and as soon as necessary macadamise the said street South and to the South ern limits of said city.

Goodwin's Male High School closed on last Friday with a treat to strawberries, cake and cream. The boys had a big time. Professor Goodwin's school has been quite successful. He had his limit and the progress of his pupils was satisfactory both to himself and patrons. This school has been established alone on merit and each year before the opening of the fall session the Professor has had his full number pledged. Next term will begin the first Monday in September.

Religious.

The Sunday School will not meet next Sunday at Hinkston.

Rev. E. O. Guerrant will preach at Old Springfield Church the second Sunday in June.

Rev. Everett Gill filled the pulpit of the Baptist church Sunday morning and evening. Two additions at morning service.

There was a fine rain in the Hinkston neighborhood last Sunday afternoon which interfered with the Sunday school. Thirty or forty persons ventured out in the rain and the lessons were assigned for June 14th (4 o'clock p.m.).

The old Hinkston church was well filled Sunday morning. Rev. C. W. Maxwell will preach there regularly on the second Sunday in each month. The next appointment is for eleven o'clock a.m., June 14th.

Why is it that a man preaches or prays so much better at some times than at others? There are two principal reasons. One is that the preacher is in the spirit of the worship—feels it in his heart—more at some times; but the most common reason lies with the hearer. The most earnest and beautiful worship will appear cold and dry to one who is not a worshipper. The best plants will die when they sprout upon a rock. The sermon or the prayer which you remember as the one which brought you nearest to God and heaven was the one which your heart was prepared to receive. The Holy Spirit had prepared the soil. Perhaps you had been walking with Jesus in some path of charity and had caught a glimpse of the light of His countenance and you were longing for more of that light. "Blessed are they who hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled."

Or perhaps the rod of affliction had broken your stubborn will; the harrow of humility had passed over your proud heart; the showers of sorrow had softened your rebellious spirit and you came, like a little child, to receive the blessing which your Father is always ready to give. "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven."

Rev. C. J. Nugent is preaching morning and evening at the M. E. church at Owingsville and will continue until after the 5th instant after which date the meeting will be conducted by Rev. Lew G. Wallace. The County Democrat says of Rev. Nugent:

"Rev. Nugent is one of the ablest divines in the Kentucky Conference and a more earnest Christian gentleman never stood in the sacred desk. He is a man of scholarly attainments, large experience in life, and his sermons are always practical and interesting. He is a Methodist of 'old school' and yields nothing, yet he is not one of those 'blind bound' religionists who believe that 'if you don't belong to my church,' you are damned and delivered. He holds up Christ as the Savior of the world and says it is necessary to have faith in Him in order to obtain salvation. He holds to the doctrine that you can't save yourself, but obedience to the divine edict is necessary in order to merit divine favor and salvation."

A representative of the Advocate was in Sharpsburg and Bethel last Friday. People are in high spirits as to the condition of crops, corn is in the condition. Wheat and meadows better than an average throughout the State and tobacco has been set and making a splendid start. The only complaint was from the scarcity of money. The Bath County Fair Company will hold its annual meeting beginning July 22nd, and continuing three days, catalogues will be issued from the Advocate Job room this week. As here-to-for elaborate preparations will be made and this company will keep up its reputation of making one of the first fairs in the State. Secretary F. S. Allen with the assistance of the board of directors knows how to meet the demands of the people and be assured that a successful and pleasant meeting will be the result of their efforts. Mr. W. R. Nunnelly accompanied the Advocate representative in the interest or the excursion to Natural Bridge on the 10th, inst. There will be a good crowd from both Sharpsburg and Bethel.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will be more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from malarial poison, Headache, indigestion, constipation, Dizziness, yield to Electric Bitters. 50c., and $1.00 per bottle at Wm. ## Scrofula

Makes life misery to thousands of people. It manifests itself in many different ways, like goitre, swellings, running sores, boils, salivary glands and phlegm and other disorders. Generally a man is wholly free from it, in some form. It clings tenaciously until the last vestige of scrofulous poison is eradicated by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Louisville Tobacco Market.

Sales on our market for the week just closed amount to 1890 hds., with receipts for the same period 1871 hds. Sales on our market since January 1, of 1895, 136 hds. Sales of the crop of 1895 on our market to date amount to 72,677 hds.

The volume of business on our market this week has shown some increase in both receipts and sales and the general tone of the market has been better for all grades of burley tobacco but are not able to report any decided advance in prices. The setting of the crop is unusually far advanced for the time of year and we would estimate that something like $5 per cent. of the intended crop is now on the hill in exceptionally fine condition and with an unusually find stand.

The following quotations fairly represent our market for burley tobacco 1895 crop.

Trash (Dark or damaged tobacco) $1.00 to $1.50.

Common color trash, $2.00 to $4.00. Medium to good color trash, $4.00 to $6.00.

Common lugs, not color, $2.00 to $4.00.

Common color lugs, $4.50 to $7.00. Medium to good color lugs, $7.00 to $9.00.

Common medium leaf $5.00 to $8.00.

Medium to good leaf, $8.00 to $15. Good to fine leaf, $15 to $18.

Select wrapper leaf, $18 to $22.00.

The above quotations are not applicable to green and frosted crops.

GLOVER & DURETT.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Underman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results are most marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rivers Junction, she was brought down with Pneumonia, succeeding La Grippe. Terrible proximities of coughing would last hours with but little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at W. S. Lloyd's drug store. Regular size 50c, and $1.00.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the miasma poison. Headache, Indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only fifty cents per bottle at W. S. Lloyd's druggist.

The Poor Dog Went to the Almshouse.

An incident which would seem to prove that a dog learns to understand the language of his country was told by one willing to touch for its truth. And here is the story:

A dog had come to buy oil in a family country village. One of the family remained on a certain day, as the dog lay in the room.

"I think Sancho ought to be put out of the way. He is only a nuisance now."

That afternoon Sancho disappeared, and as the days passed did not return. In the course of a week a neighbor said, "See that your dog is up at the poorhouse." On inquiry it was learned that Sancho, having called at the poorhouse and been kindly received, had continued on as a guest. And so after, although he sometimes made a brief call at his old home, he layed at the town farm, and there peacefully ended his dog-life—Philadelphia American.

He Could Light His Breath.

There were but few censors on record, who in their many pages of the dental, ophthalmic, podiatric, and medical institutions and the museums, of men who could emit air from their lungs which was so highly charged with carbon as to be inflammable. One of these was a Michigan (?) negro, which the writer hereof remembers reading about 15 or 20 years ago. Another freak who could light his breath was William Jackson of Fayetteville, N. Y., and later of Middlebury, Vt. Jackson accidentally learned of the incombustible character of the air exhaled from his lungs in 1887, and the discovery is said to have almost frightened him to death.

After this he became a local celebrity. Mr. Jackson went quietly to bed and did not inform any one of the occurrence until he visited the leading Fayetteville physician, Dr. T. E. Quincy, early next morning. Later he consulted Professor William M. Smith, a chemist of the Syracuse Medical college, and from him it was learned that a similar case was reported from Italy in 1874. It was the general opinion that the inflammable gas came from an overplus of carbon in the blood, but Professor Smith proved that it came from the stomach, Jackson being afflicted with a very peculiar form of dyspepsia.

The Michigan negro referred to above did not have to "light his breath," Mr. Jackson did, but would "blow" his shaggs, etc., by merely blowing upon them. What finally became of these "men with breath of flame" I cannot say.—St. Louis Post.

A New French Heroine.

The French have discovered a new heroine, who may not be unfortunately destined to do much. In the terrible year when the German army was approaching Champigny, a young woman in mourning arrived in the town and took up her quarters in a house about half a mile from the chateau, where Bismarck was lodged. Every morning and every evening she went out with her gun, and in three days her bag amounted to six German sentries. These were taken by the enemy, but at once released. Three more Germans fell to her rifle, and then once more she was seized. But the mercy of the enemy was great, and she was once more set at liberty. But the sport was too good to be given up, so she continued to continue until every one thought the thing had gone far enough. So the next time they caught her they put her up against a wall and let daylight through her unconfined breast. This story is quite true, says he. He has written some pretty bad verses about her, which were recited at the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the glorious battle of Champigny and were most warmly applauded. Besides he can show you the wall against which the ruffian soldiers put her up, and the bricks are in it to this day. Therefore, sirs, deny it not. But it is a pity that only one man knew her name and that he is dead.—London Realm.

Fate of the Canals of the Two Oceans.

Givors slipped by almost unnoticed. A trim little town hung out to sun in long strips upon terraces ascending from the water side, its walls were like rocks rising above gardens and vineyards, giving a general effect of warm gray and green, dashed with vivid greens. It is a town of some commercial pretensions, the gateway of a canal a dozen miles long leading up through the valley of the little river Gier to iron works and coke works and glass works tucked away in the hills.

The canal of the Two Oceans was, and I suppose continues to be, its sounding name. But the revolution came, and the digging never extended beyond the first dozen miles, and so it came to pass that the canal of the Two Oceans was, as such, a delusion, and that its golden future which once lay ahead of Givors now lies a long way astern. Yet the town has an easy and contented look, as though it had saved enough from the wreck of its magnificent destiny to leave it still comfortably well to do.—Thomas A. Janvier in Century.

A Lamb as a City Pet.

Early peddlars in Fourth avenue were somewhat surprised on the other day to see a man turn into the avenue from Thirtieth street, followed by a well grown and thickly fleeced lamb. The man walked rapidly down the street, the lamb trotting after him and wagging its tail from time to time at a glance from its master. A block below the point where the strange companions had just appeared the man disappeared down the stairs and into a basement. The lamb, however, continued its hostilities, skipped nimbly down the steps and disappeared along with its master.—New York Sun.

A BUFFALO STAMPEDE.

An Indian Chief Saves a White Boy From Being Crushed to Death.

A number of the bulls began to bellow and to throw dirt with their hoofs. Their noise and stir started a herd down the nearest hill, and we saw a host of them come tearing down the slope with long, lunging jumps, some of them flinging their heads and tails high in the air, jumping sideways and bawling in a mad, frenzied way, just as cattle sometimes plunge down a hill, a man half way, half in a state of nervous excitement.

There was now a perfect confusion of noise, and the dust was rising in all hands. The chief motioned to me to shoot.

I carried a short thick barreled buffalo gun—it was before the days of breech-loaders—which threw an ounce and a half slug. I aimed at a bull some 50 feet away, who offered a broadside shot in his pawing. The heavy ball knocked him off his feet, and the next moment he was at the last gasp.

The chief also fired his rifle, with what effect I did not see, for our shots did not startle even the nearest animals, so great was the noise of their own bawlings and so thick the cloud of dust they had raised. A mad craze seemed suddenly to have possessed the whole herd, for a great crowd had pressed down out of the ravine and hundreds were plowing down the bluffs. The situation had suddenly become startling and dangerous.

The chief in alarm sprang to his feet and threw the wolfskin from his head. I did the same. He had evidently counted on scattering the buffaloes and frightening them by our first shots.

Instead a tumbling mass of them had gathered about the animal which I had shot, and excited to greater frenzy than ever by the smell of blood, were deep, quavering roars, which made the ground tremble under us.

The dust from the multiplying numbers which surged in toward us enveloped us as it was with alkali, set me into a paroxysm of sneezing and coughing in spite of my intense alarm. It now enveloped us so thick a cloud that we could practically see nothing. Suddenly the chief seized me by the arm. "Come," he said, "We go quick!" and we started at a run. We dodged hither and thither to get out of the way of plunging, bawling animals, many of which lunged past within arm's reach.

The dust had grown continuously thicker, and my eyes, filled with the smearing alkali, failed me utterly before we had run 50 yards. I was again seized by a violent fit of coughing and sneezing.

I shouted to Bear between my coughings that I could not see.

He answered only, "We go quick—quick!" and, getting a tight grip upon my arm, jerked me this way and that as we rushed ahead.

But active and powerful as he was, he could not save me in my blindness from collision. I was hit by one of the huge animals and knocked over. The creature struck me on the left side, and I was wrenched from the chief's grasp and rolled rolling over and over in the dust. In fact, I was knocked breathless, half stunned, and could not have moved if my own accord. I should have been run over and crushed for the chief. As it was I just had sense enough to know that I was jerked from the ground, tossed upward and borne forward upon his shoulders.

He ran like a deer, carrying me as if I had been a papoose, jumping and dodging this way and that among the throng of animals, whose rumbling roar sounded in my ears like the muttering of thunder.

Twice he was run into and thrown, and we both measured out full lengths, but he was on his feet again in an instant, and lifting me as before, darted ahead, seemingly unhurt. How he managed to keep his eyeglass and his bearings in that dark, dead-end among that extended mass of animals is always to be a mystery to me.

But he did it.

He carried me out of that bellowing, crazy crowd of animals, and set me upon my feet upon the hill above them, giving utterance to a huge grunt of satisfaction when he found that I could stand.—Frank Well Calkins in St. Nicholas.

Paganini's Violin.

Paganini came by his favorite violin in a curious way. A French merchant lent him the instrument to play upon at a concert at Leghorn. After the concert Paganini brought it back to its owner, when the latter exclaimed, to the delighted astonishment of the player: "Never more will I profane the strings which your fingers have touched. That instrument is yours."

At the Reception.

"Our hostess reminds me of an air pump."

"What part of it, pray?"

"The exhausted receiver, of course!"—New York Tribune.

Engines, Military Red Tape.

The London Chronicle published a story of military red tape which will bear comparison with the best of stories. I do not know what higher praise I can give it. A serjeant corporal and trousers belonging to a lance corporal in a line regiment were damaged by a rat. A board of inquiry under the C. O. of the battalion solemnly assembled at Colombo to investigate the outrage. The lance corporal was called and gave his evidence, describing the appearance of the rat which jumped off the shelf as he was taking down his coat. A second lance corporal gave corroborative evidence of the occurrence. The damaged garments were produced and examined by the board. The quartermaster was called and deposed that "it would cost about £1 shilling to repair the serjeant and trowsers." The board deliberated and recorded its finding thus:

"The board, having carefully considered the evidence and examined the serjeant frock and trousers, is of opinion that they are damaged by rats, through no carelessness on the part of No. 2373, Lance Corporal C. D.; that the damage was unavoidable; that the damaged articles are irreparable, and that the expense for repairing—viz., £1 shilling—should be charged to the public purse."

The proceedings were then signed, passed to the chief paymaster, forwarded to the war office and recorded in the archives of the nation. All this for 1 shilling! I wonder how many shillings it cost.

Thras and Its Fortunes.

In 1789 Plus VI had his tiara altered, and it was reset by Carlo Saraceni, the pope's jeweler, with the addition of three diamonds of large size, 36 smaller ones, 24 large rubies from Mogul, 22 large emeralds, supporting 12 small diamonds, a large number of pearls, with this inscription in diamonds, "Ex munificencia Plus VI. P. O. M." Plus VI was as well known, forced by the French to dispose of this tiara, as was most of his treasures, to pay in part the 6,000,000 francs required by the treaty of Tolentino in 1797. Napoleon I, in the month of June, 1805, sent as a gift to Plus VII a new and magnificent tiara, on the summit of which again appeared the celebrated emerald of Gregory XIII. It was presented to the pope by Cardinal Fesch, the emperor's minister plenipotentiary, and the pope, in his letter of thanks, dated July 23, 1805, informed the emperors of Milan's intent to use it for the first time at the papal coronation on the feast of Saints Peter and Paul. When the pope was taken prisoner in 1809 by the emperor, this tiara was seized by General Moliere, together with other treasures, and taken back to Paris, but on the restoration of the monarchy and the return of the pope to Rome, it was restored to him by Louis XVII.—Notes and Queries.

Sharp Enough to Take the Hint.

A good story of Lord Rothschild is going the rounds, and it deserves to be copied.

A young man once came to him with letters of introduction, which stated that he was thrown entirely on his own resources on account of the death of his father, a much respected man, who died from grief over account of his bankruptcy. It was further stated that the young man was very clever and smart, and Lord Rothschild was asked if he could do something for him.

The millionaire took him by the arm and marched him through the city and past the Stock Exchange, introducing him to several well-known brokers on the way, and then bade him farewell.

"But," said the young man, "you do not expect such things, are you not going to say something for me?"

"My dear fellow," replied the other, "if you are as clever as I am told you are you will know what to do yourself."

The young man was smart enough to take the hint, and by the prestige of his apparent friendship with Lord Rothschild gave him obtained unlimited credit. He soon made headway, and is now one of the most successful brokers on the exchange.—London Tit-Bits.

Round Growing Fungus.

In "Recollections of a Happy Life" Miss North describes many of her young enthusiasms, and among others that of collecting and painting English fungi.

On one evening she says, I came upon a fungus about the size of a large turkey's egg. Eager to see it develop, I took it up carefully and carried it home. I put it under a tumbler on the window sill of my bedroom at night.

At daylight I was awakened by a horrible crash of splintering glass. Behold the tumbler had fallen to the floor and broken to bits. The glass was standing five inches high, the having crushed itself frus from its restraining eggshell shell, and in growing had raised the tumbler and tilted it sideways until it fell over and to the floor.

The fungus had a horrible smell, and soon a swarm of flies were hovering over it.

WOMEN WHO FASCINATE WOMEN.

Tragic Results that Have Followed in Some Modern Instances.

Cases of the unnatural influence which women have exercised over women are not uncommon. The most noted instance of that kind was in the case of Miss Alice Mitchell of Memphis. Miss Mitchell's father was a merchant of wealth and she lived in great refinement in the fashionable part of the city. She was frequently visited by Miss Freda Ward of Gold Dust, Ark., and the pair seemed to be inseparable. One day in January, 1892, however, Miss Mitchell was driving through the streets with a friend when she met Miss Ward. She jumped from the carriage suddenly and without a word cut Miss Ward's throat. The poor girl fell to the sidewalk and died while being taken to a hospital.

No one could determine the motive for the deed. Miss Mitchell told various stories, one of which was that she killed Miss Ward because she had circulated scandals about her. Finally she made a statement which she adhered to, in which she said:

"I killed Freda because I loved her and she refused to marry me. I asked her to marry me three times, and at last she consented. We were going to marry her and go to St. Louis. When Freda promised to marry me, I was so happy. I sent her an engagement ring and she wore it for a time, but when it was returned to me I was miserable. I could not bear to be separated from her, so I resolved to kill her. I would rather she were dead than away from me."

Miss Mitchell was tried for murder in July, 1892, and on being adjudged insane was sent to an asylum.

A peculiar case lay in the infatuation which Miss Margaret Messmore of Los Angeles had for Miss Grace Miltimore of Savannah. Both girls came of good families and were exceedingly pretty. In 1892 they roomed together in Chicago, where they were studying music. The parents became alarmed at the friendship which existed between them, and Miss Miltimore was induced to return home. She left her trunk containing many valuable articles with her friend, who refused to give up Miss Grace to her husband, said Miss Messmore, "why should I give her things to her family?" Miss Messmore was finally taken back to Los Angeles almost by force. Mrs. Alma Erhardt's love for Mrs. Charlotte Goethel of Newark caused her to be sent to an insane asylum in January, 1894. At the trial Mrs. Goethel produced a letter from Mrs. Erhardt, which contained a distinct proposal of marriage. Another letter urged her to kill her two children. Mrs. Eugenia Van Cott, daughter of a prominent minister of Smithville, N. Y., was arrested in September, 1893, for enticing Mrs. Alice Tauris away from her husband. The case never came to trial.—New York Herald.

Medieval Outbusts.

The energies which in our own day find vent in half a dozen forms of athletic exercise had in the thirteenth century hardly more than the single outlet of fighting. Men talked of war and sang of it, and the close of the thirteenth century was a period when a succession of fortunate expeditions and a soldierly king had turned men's thoughts more strongly than usual upon the popular topic of war. The popularity must have acted upon the immature lads at Oxford cooped up in the narrow streets of a crowded city, without, or practically without, books, much as the cheap romances of our own day are believed to affect the office boy.

The millionaire took him by the arm and marched him through the city and past the Stock Exchange, introducing him to several well-known brokers on the way, and then bade him farewell.

"But," said the young man, "you do not expect such things, are you not going to say something for me?"

"My dear fellow," replied the other, "if you are as clever as I am told you are you will know what to do yourself."

There were plenty of rogues in the thirteenth century, of course, who were able and willing to help the militant student to add practice to theory, and when we recollect that there were no better police than half a dozen Dogberries, that the city was unlighted, and that even lads went armed, one no longer has cause to wonder at the insecurity of life in Oxford 600 years ago.—Macmillan's Magazine.

Napoleon in the Russian Campaign.

Around the campfires there was, during the remaining months of winter, a passive endurance, mingled with some murmuring about the horrors caused by one man's ambition. The emperor set his men an example of uncomplaining cheerfulness. His soldiers continued as ever, despite the cold, for they were not afraid of the winter, lost nothing of its intensity. Savary thought he could himself, accomplishing in one month what elsewhere would have been, for him, the work of three.

Mme. de Bonnart remembered to have heard him say that he felt better during those months than before or after. This vigor of body, combined with the same iron determination as of old, did indeed work miracles, and this in spite of the fact that his indefatigable secretary, Maret, was long at the point of death.—"Life of Napoleon" in Cent.

The County.

The Democratic Mass Convention of the county met on Saturday afternoon, May 30, pursuant to the call of the State Committee. County Chairman, H. R. French called the Convention to order and stated that representatives from both wings of the party had agreed upon a few preliminaries in order that the business of the Convention might be advanced with greater dispatch and in a more harmonious manner. This announcement was received with evident satisfaction by all parties.

The Chair recognized Col. A. W. Hamilton who nominated Mr. A. A. Hazelrig for permanent chairman and W. A. Dehaven was also unanimously chosen Secretary of the Convention.

All this was in accordance to the agreement entered into before the meeting of the Convention.

Mr. Hazelrig, upon taking the chair, made a happy and most appropriate speech complimenting the Convention upon the spirit of fairness and harmony evident in the ranks of both wings of the party. Judge L. Apperson introduced a resolution instructing the delegates who were to be selected to cast their votes for Judge H. R. French for District Delegate and to use all honorable means to secure his election. Col. A. W. Hamilton introduced as a substitute for Judge Apperson's resolution a set of resolutions given below. Judge Apperson made the point of order that these (the Hamilton) resolutions were not in order because they were not germane to the Convention.

The Chair promptly decided the point of order not well taken.

Judge A. appealed from the decision of the Chair and a vote being taken a division was called for. But at this point it was plainly evident that such a course could only result in confusion, and since both sides wanted a fair and honest expression, Judge A. asked and was granted leave to withdraw not only from appeal but also from his original resolution, leaving those introduced by Col. Hamilton as the original motion. The resolutions introduced by Col. Hamilton were as follows:

"Resolved, By the Democrats of Montgomery County, Ky., in mass convention assembled, this, the 30th day of May, 1896: First, that we hereby affirm at a deliberate conviction of this Convention that the Act of 1873 in so far as it demonetized silver and established gold as a single unit of value, is a flagrant violation of one of the most important provisions of the constitution of the United States, a violation which every political party ought to condemn and every good citizen should assist in expunging from the statutes of the Republic. We therefore favor the repeal of all laws by which silver was demonetized and demand its unqualified restoration to the right of free and unlimited coinage in the limits of the United States as money of final redemption at the old ratio of 16 to 1. Second, that S. S. Priest, J. T. Highland, C. C. Turner, J. W. Sewell, Shroud, Elijah Coons, A. W. Hamilton, Judge M. Cassidy, C. E. Chick, C. B. Duff, Egbert Coons, G. E. Chick, John Scott, B. R. Turner, M. A. Scott, James Shroud, Dr. W. T. Simral, C. B. Gillispie, H. L. Maxey, Ruth Hadson, Albert Bridges, R. M. Burbridge, I. N. Green, W. B. O'Connell, Frank Thompson, Asa Bean, 'Squire Turner, Harvey Green, Ernest Gill.

The motion being put and a vote taken it was not possible for the Chair to determine the result and a division was called for. Tellers were appointed, but before the count had progressed very far, the single standard men gave up the fight and conceded the result to the free silver people. The Chair, therefore, declared the original motion adopted. Still further in the interest of harmony a resolution was introduced declaring it the sense of the Convention that the delegates shall stand instructed in case the majority of the delegates in the Tenth District shall be for the single standard, to vote for Judge H. R. French for District Delegate to the Chicago Convention, and to use all honorable means to secure his election; but should the majority of the delegates be in favor of free silver, then the delegates from this county shall present the name of A. W. Hamilton for District Delegate, and shall use all honorable means to secure his election.

The Convention then adjourned.

Rah for McCreary!—He is a Democrat.

Richmond, Ky., May 31.—Congressman McCreary returned from Washington last night and viewed with alarm the wreckage wrought in his district by silver and the people. He takes the defeat good naturally, and says it will abide by the result and shall fight enthusiastically for the Chicago nominee, who, at this time, it appears, will stand on a silver platform. He will return to Washington after the State Convention.

Putnam.....	9	"The Democracy of Montgomery county in Convention Assembled, declare that we are opposed to any contraction of the currency. We hold to the use of both gold and silver as the STANDARD MONEY of the country, and to the coining of both gold and silver without discrimination against either metal, the dollar unit of both metals to be of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value, or be adjusted by such safe guards of legislation as shall insure the equal power of every dollar at all times in the markets and in the payment of debts."

"Resolved, That those who were present at the Chair recognized Col. A. W. Hamilton who nominated Mr. A. A. Hazelrigg, for permanent chairman and W. A. DeHaven was also unanimously chosen Secretary of the Convention. All this was in accordance to the agreement entered into before the meeting of the Convention. Mr. Hazelrigg, upon taking the chair, made a happy and most appropriate speech complimenting the Convention upon the spirit of fairness and harmony evident in the ranks of both wings of the party. Judd L. Apperson introduced a resolution instructing the delegates who were to be selected to cast their votes for Judge H. R. French for District Delegate and to use all honorable means to secure his election. Col. A. W. Hamilton introduced as a substitute for Judge Apperson's resolution a set of resolutions given below. Judge Apperson made the point of order that these (of the Hamilton) resolutions were not in order because they were not germane to the matter before the Convention. The Chair promptly decided the point of order not well taken, Judge A. Apperson appealed from the decision of the Chair and a vote being taken a division was called for. But at this point it was plainly evident that such a course could only result in confusion, and since both sides wanted a fair and honest expression, Judge Apperson asked and was granted leave to withdraw not only his appeal from the decision of the Chair, but also his original resolution, leaving those introduced by Col. Hamilton as the original motion. The resolutions introduced by Col. Hamilton were as follows:

"Resolved, By the Democrats of Montgomery County, Ky., in mass convention assembled, this, the 30th day of May, 1896: First, that we hereby affirm as a deliberate conviction of this Convention that the Act of 1873 in so far as it demonetized silver and established gold as a single unit of value, is a flagrant violation of one of the most important provisions of the constitution of the United States, a violation which every political party ought to condemn and every good citizen should assist in expunging from the statutes of the Republic. We therefore favor the repeal of all laws by which silver was demonetized and demand its unequal restoration to the right of free and unlimited coinage in the limits of the United States as money of final redemption, at the old ratio of 16 to 1. Second, that S. S. Priest, J. T. Highland, C. C. Turner, J. Williams, Elijah Coons, Dr. J. C. Sewell, Judge M. M. Cassidy, W. A. Hamilton, Richard Hunt, C. P. Chennault, J. C. Duff, Egbert Coons, G. E. Chick, Joe Scott, B. R. Turner, M. A. Scott, James Shorthouse, Dr. W. T. Simral, J. C. Gillispie, H. L. Maxey, Rufus Hadden, Albert Bridges, R. M. Burbridge, I. N. Green, W. B. O'Connell, Frank Thompson, Asa Bean, "Squire" Turner, Harvey Green, Ernest Gillis,

The motion being put and a vote taken it was not possible for the Chair to determine the result and a division was called for. Tellers were appointed, but before the count had progressed very far, the single standard men gave up the fight and conceded the right to the free silver people. The Chair, therefore, declared the original motion adopted. Still further in the interest of harmony a resolution was introduced declaring that in the sense of the Convention it is the sense of the Convention that the delegates shall stand instructed in the single standard, to be for the standard to control, but he showed himself fully equal to the task. From the moment he took the stand it was evident that both sides had confidence in not only his ability but his determination to do what was absolutely fair to all parties. His speech on taking the stand was replete with sound advice and the genuine ring to it caught the ear of the immense throng. Much of the credit, is due to Mr. Hazelrigg for the spirit of harmony exhibited in the convention.

Rah for McCready!—He is a Democrat.

Richmond, Ky., May 31.—Congressman McCready returned from Washington last night and visited with alarm the wreckage wrought in his district by silver and the people. He takes the district more naturally, and says he will abide by the result and shall fight enthusiastically for the Chicago nominee, who, at this time, it appears, will stand on a silver platform. He will return to Washington after the State Convention.

Don't Miss It.

The noisiest crowd and a jolly time is expected on the excursion to Natural Bridge, Wednesday, June 10th. Don't miss it.

A Baby's Life Saved.

"My baby had a torpid liver, which prevents digestion and permits food to ferment and putrefy in the stomach. Then follow dizziness, headache, insomnia, stupor, and, if not relieved, bilious fever or blood poisoning. Her pills stimulate the stomach, rouse the liver, cure headache, dizziness, convulsions, and spasms caused by all drugs. The only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

isn't anything miraculous about it—it is the most natural thing in the world.

It simply puts the digestive

Mr. A. A. Hazelrigg presided with ease and firmness at the convention on Saturday. He had the largest
